Course Title :- British Literature : The Early 20th Century

Course Code :- UG-ENG-501/C-11

1) Discuss the source of the title of the play Arms and the Man. What is Shaw's attitude about theme of "Love" and "war"?

⇒ Shaw has taken the title from the opening like of Roman Epic poet Virgil's work The Aeneid. The Latin version of the line is — "Arma Virumque Cano", which is translated as "of arms and the man, I Sing".

(#) The theme of "love and war" is interwoven in this play. In the title Arms and the Man, the word 'arms' implies the weapons and ammunition that is used during the war. The word 'arms' also has another connotation and it means the "arms of lover". So, love is another issue here.

But Shaw has not glorified theme of "love and war" like other writers. He treated these things in a different perspective.

The romantic tradition of war ignore some bitter realities of war — the suffering, the loss, the deprivations. Shaw wants to make his audience aware of this other side of war which is often overlooked. Sergius, Raina and Catherine all atleast initially, view war as a kind of stage where an honourable man can through bravery and purity, achieve glory. Here Shaw brings the character like Bluntschli, who is a Swiss mercenary to project the wildness and futility of war.

For the Swiss Captain, being a soldier is just a profession and wars is just a business. He feels that though Soldiers fight for adventure, fight for their country, but first of all they are human beings. And like any other human being, they would also like to live their life as long as they can. Eventually, both Sergius and Raina adopt Bluntschli's views. He also destroys Raina's romantic idea of wars and heroism and he proves that the best Soldiers are often not identified as such on the outside.

On the other hand, Shaw presents the complexities of love in real life. Social conventions in Shaw's time period included public and formal courting, parental approval and consideration of social status and wealth of each partner. But the characters in this play like Raina and Sergius realises that they do not really love each other and break the conventions. They finally end up with a person that is best suited to them.

Shaw shows us the irrationality and absurdity of acting by false systems of behaviour that will force us to live less fulfilling lives. Shaw does not simply dismiss romance and heroism, he redefines them in the light of realism. Through the course of the play, Shaw brings his characters and audience to a better understanding of these values.

3.) How far the play Arms and the Man is an anti-romantic Comedy?

→ The subtitle of the play clearly shows the nature of the play. The play is an anti-romantic comedy. The play is an anti-romantic because in it Shaw has attacked the romantic and idealistic notions about life and it is a comedy because in it he has exposed and laughed at the romantic illusions about love and war.

In Arms and the Man Shaw exposes the unsoundness of the romantic view of war. There was a popular view that war is a romantic game which gives a man the opportunity of displaying his heroism. But Shaw ridicules the romantic views about war and Soldiering in the play.

The play opens with a note of romance and heroism. Raina is a romantic girl, who is engaged with Sergius, a "Byronic hero", who has gone to the battlefield like a knight. He makes a Cavalry charge and wins the victory and becomes the hero. Both Raina and Sergius live in a world of romance and unreality. and for that their romance is easily shattered coming contact with reality. It is Bluntschli who makes Raina aware of her foolish notion about war. He tells her that Sergius is a fool and he and his regiment nearly committed Suicide only the pistol missed fire. Gradually, both Raina and Sergius understand their hollowness and Sergius said that "war is nothing but the 'coward's art'.

In Arms and the Man Shaw takes a realistic view about love and marriage and exposes the hollowness of romantic love. Both Raina and Sergius have 'higher love' for each other. But soon their 'higher love' shattered. Sergius made love with Louka, the made servant behind Raina's back. And Sergius also learned that Raina made love to Bluntschli. Thus, the cobweb of romantic net is broken and the search light of reality ridicules the false romanticism.

In order to give his play an anti-romantic tone, Shaw has taken the help of exaggeration of reality. A fugitive soldier may demand food when he is starving, but it is hard to believe that he would demand chocolate. In this play, Bluntschli demands chocolate from Raina after he returns from battlefield. Again, although Bluntschli says that soldiers are born fools, it is not credible to them not to observe a pistol lying before them, even after a thorough search, while a maid servant like Louka notices it as soon as she enters the room.

To conclude, we can say that the play Arms and the Man, which opens with a romantic setting is obviously an anti-romantic comedy. Shaw has excellently exposed and ridiculed the romantic notion of love, war and marriage. It is therefore aptly said by Chesterton — "The play is built not on pathos, but on bathos are anti-climax."

4.) What is the underlying theme in W.B. Yeats's poem 'Leda and the Swan'? Bring out the mythical allusion of the poem.

→ (#) One very significant theme in the poem "Leda and the Swan" is the theory of history. Yeats famously believed that history is a series of interlocking and repeating patterns. The poem is based on the story of Leda and Zeus. Zeus in the form of a Swan raped Leda. which according to myth, led to the Trojan war and the Golden Age of Greeee. The poem treats this moment between Leda and Zeus as a mythological and historical tipping point.

Ofcourse, the poem makes clear that the thing that set this all in motion was an act of sexual violation and that this violence, in turn led to more terribly violent events before that Golden Age emerged.

Accordingly, the poem is also often read as an allusion to the dawn of Christianity. Here Leda's experience also calls to mind another woman's experience with divine conception — Mary, the mother of Jesus Christ. Yeats himself wrote in this book A vision that he saw Leda's rape as similar to the annunciation of Angel Gabriel that Mary will conceive a child by God. Likewise, just like Helen have a transformative effect on Greek History, Mary's Son Jesus christ also had a transformative effect on global history.

Many readers have interpreted the poem as an allusion to the colonial relationship between Great Britain and Ireland and more specifically to the Irish wars of independence. Britain like the mighty Swan fully conquered Ireland, the helpless victim like Leda. However, the civil war in Ireland was an immense turning point for Ireland and England. Thus, just as Zeus's rape "engenders" the rise of the Greek Golden Age, the English domination of Ireland eventually gave rise to Irish independence.

(H) The Speaker retells the story from a Greek mythology. The story is about the rape of Leda by Zeus. Zeus, the father of the Olympian Gods, took the form of a Swan in order to seduce Leda, daughter of king Thestius. This conception results in the birth of the most beautiful woman, Helen. Helen was kidnapped by the Trojans and this incident caused the great Trojan war. It brought the end of a mythological era and engendered the rise of the Greek Golden Age.

6.) or. Critically explain the theme of modernity in T. S. Eliot's poem The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock.

→ T.S. Eliot's "The love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" carries the characteristics of modernist poetry. With the arrival of "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock", the romantic concept of poetry has been changed. The poetry is no longer Spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings. It is not a turning loose of emotion, it is not an expression of personality. Instead, it is an escape from emotion and from personality.

While the romantic and Victorian poets sought beauty and freedom from tension in nature, Eliot searched poetic element in the ugliness of modern Urban life. He conveys the Sordidness of modern Urban life by mentioning of "restless nights in one-night cheap hotels and Sawdust restaurants". The expressions like "Pools that stand in drains" and "the Soot that falls from chimneys" also refer to the insanity conditions and the industrial pollution of modern cities.

The interest of the poem centres around the protagonist J. Alfred Prufrock. He represents an individual as well as the universal type. He has no claim to be called Hero, as the traditional romantic poetry can justly be so called. His indecision, his nervousness and self-belittling put the Stamp of the anti-hero upon him. He Spends his time by uttering "Do I dare" and "Do I dare", but has not the courage to declare his love. He is unlike the hero of romantic poetry, over sensitive about himself. His baldness of head and thinness of arms and legs lead him to think of parting his hair behind or wearing the bottoms of his trousers rolled up, but he can not escape from the unpleasant thought "I grow old... I grow old." Being a split personality, he is one to whom, exposing of the heart to a woman seems to be a sort of an obscene experience. Thus, unlike romantic hero, he shows his over sensitive cowardice and perversion.

While romantic poetry dealt with love, with all its glamour, "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" treats love as an object of fear and anxiety for which lover is unable to express his love. Also the women in this poem, though are as beautiful as of romantic poems, their difference is emphasized by their cultural pretence - "their talk of Michale Angelo" and their habit of fixing someone "in a formulated phrase".

The use of colloquial expressions, unusual line length use of allusiveness, objective correlative go to make it a modern poem. Thus, "The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock" proves a trend setter for modern poetry and a definite departure from the traditional romantic poems.

1. Discuss the source of the title of the play Arms and the Man. What is Shaw's attitude about theme of "Love" and "war"

⇒ Shaw takes the title of the play Arms and the Man from the opening lines of Dryden's translation of Virgil's Aeneid: "arma virumque cano" ("arms and the man I sing" or "I sing of arms and of man....") Shaw glorified war. Shaw take "arms and the man" and omitted "I sing" to assert anti~~war~~ war stands. The original title of the play was "Alphs and Balkans". Later shaw revised the title. The subtitle of the play is "Anti-romantic comedy". Originally the subtitle was "a romantic comedy". Shaw revised the subtitle because he felt that the audience was more concerned about romantic aspects of the play and ignored Shaw's anti romantic treatment of love and war.

The play has two major themes: one is love and the other is war. These themes are interwoven, for Shaw believed that while war is evil and stupid, marriage desirable and good, both had become wrapped in romantic illusions which led to disastrous wars and also to unhappy marriages.

In Arms and the Man, Shaw expresses his anti-romantic attitude towards love and war. In the play he does not idealise war. He exposes the hollowness of the love and war. He also exposes the follies of romantic love. He shows that love is not a romance but a reality. To him love and marriage should be based on economic security and mutual understanding. In the play he tries to find out the essence of truth behind the garb of romance and respectability.

2. "A narrow save! But a miss is as good as a mile" — Contextualize and comment.

⇒ In George Bernard Shaw's play Arms and the Man, Bluntschli, the Serbian fugitive soldier uttered the quoted speech in Act I after the Russian officer had left. Bluntschli was hidden behind the curtains by Raina. He escaped the danger of being caught and killed by the Bulgarian soldiers narrowly. Bluntschli's speech alludes to a proverb "A failure or escape is what it is, however narrow the margin" meaning an escape by an inch is as good as a mile because the result is the same. Bluntschli's escape by a narrow margin saved his life. Therefore he must not discuss the margin of escape.

3. How far the play Arms and the Man is an an Anti-romantic comedy?

⇒ Shaw's play Arms and the Man was subtitled as "a romantic comedy". Later he revised the subtitle as "An Anti-romantic comedy", because he felt that the audience was more concerned about romantic aspects of the play and ignored Shaw's anti-romantic treatment of love and war. Shaw takes the title for his play 'Arms and the Man' from the opening lines of Dryden's translation of Virgil's Aeneid: "arma virumque cano" ("arms and the man I sing" or "I sing of arms and of a man ..."). Virgil glorified war and the heroic feats of Aenear in the battlefield. The title of Shaw's play itself indicates an ironic treatment, which leads to satiric expectations, since he clips 'I sing' deliberately. Evidently, Shaw's propose in this play is to attack the romantic notion of war (Arms) and the neo-platonic misreading of

2021.10.29 13:50

'Higher Love.' Still, Arms and the Man is not an anti-war play, but rather a satirical assault on those who would glorify the horrors of war. Shaw has aptly called Arms and the Man 'an anti-romantic comedy'. In the title 'Arms' stands for the romantic glorification of war and soldiering and 'Man' stands for 'life force'.

Arms and the Man, subtitled as an 'anti-romantic comedy', is a satire on the conventional idealistic views on war and Higher Love. The play has two major themes: one is war, the other is love. These themes are interwoven, for Shaw believed that while war is evil and stupid, marriage desirable and good, both had become wrapped in romantic illusions which led to disastrous wars and also to unhappy marriages. The romantic view of war is based on the idealistic notion that man fight because they are heroes and that the soldier who takes the risks wins the greatest glory and is the greatest hero. Shaw is against the horror of war and its cruelty.

Thus, in Arms and the Man Shaw expresses his anti-romantic attitude towards love and war. In the play he not only exposes the hollowness of the love and war but also exposes the follies of romantic love. To him love is not a romance but a reality. Love and marriage should be based on economic security and mutual understanding. In the play he tries to find out the truth behind the garb of romance and respectability.

5. "A shudder in the loins engenders there
The broken wall, the burning roof and tower
And Agamemnon dead." — Elucidate.

=> In W.B Yeats' poem "Leda and the Swan" the phrase 'shudder in the loins' refers to the moment of orgasm or insemination or vaginal penitration. The act of insemination gave birth to a series of catastrophic consequences, the Trojan War, the series of Troy and the death of Agamemnon. On the same night Leda mated with her husband Tyndareus. She become pregnant and laid two eggs. Helen and Polydeuces, children of Zeus were born from one egg and Castor and Clytemnestra, children of Tyndareus born from other. Helen was responsible for the seize of Troy. Agamemnon was murdered by Clytemnestra or her lover Aegisthus. Clytemnestra was jealous of Cassandra, a Trojan priestess of Apollo whom Agamemnon brought to Mycenae. Beside Clytemnestra hated Agamemnon for leaving her to participate in the Trojan War and also for sacrificing their daughter Iphigenia.

- Objective: The idea of Indian culture is formed by certain principles, which have become motivated by habits and reforms. Beginning of the twentieth century, the culture of the Indian culture is the Rabindra Sahitya. Under the many variations of Rabindra literature, the tunes of universality are found in the tunes of universality. Rabindranath saw the truth as an ideal for the people and the people of the world. Rabindra conforms to the true conformity of the word of Advaita Truth. Integration with integrity with the creation of the whole world. Advaita thinking is identical with the truth, so it is also accomplished in the Satak Rabindranath did not judge the truth with a specific perspective on the open mind. Apart from communal thinking, the scandalous development of life has influenced Rabindranath, and it has spread all over Rabindra literature. Rabindra literature is not being tired of the absolutist development of the unmatched development of personality. This intellect is expressed by adopting the true concept of "human truth". The narrowness and humidity of human beings is revealed through "the supreme soul". The meeting of Rabindranath's philosophy through Webinar is to meet the soul of the soul as the identity of the soul.
- Outcome: In this discussion speakers referred to the the human unity and communal unity of Rabindranath as the nationality of India from Rabindranath's point of view.

1. Name of the organizing Department: Department of History

3. Title of the Webinar: One day National level Seminar on GENDER AND SOCIETY: DIFFERENT DIMENSIONS.

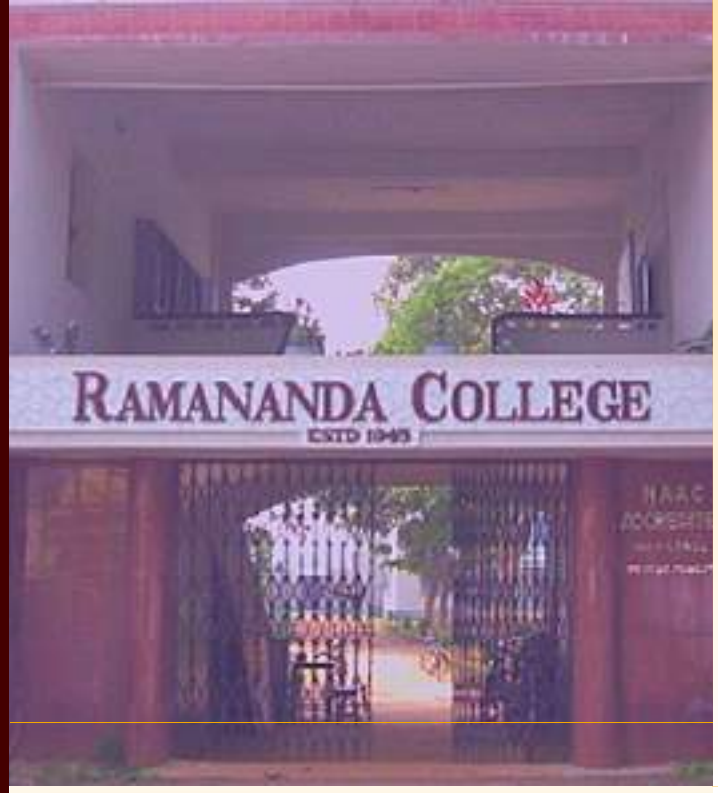
9. Objective: Some major objectives of this Webinar is: The study of gender and society provides the window of opportunity to understand the cusp of gender-oriented issues of our society. It also creates the conditions for discerning the domain of a much-contested façade of social discourse. The seminar helps shape and reshape our overtly lopsided understanding about the conceptualization of women in our presumed social structure. The issue of gender study equally offers a plethora of insightful inquisitions that raises a basketful of queries that has so long been patently entrenched in our socially-crafted institutions. However, the institutionalized gender-matrix education is pitifully inadequate to feed into the socially equal parameters of human society. Admittedly, the seminar has attained the purpose of hammering the semblance of conceptual and practical ideation and understanding of the prism of gender study in a supposedly hands-on way.
10. Outcome: The issue of gender and society is a very relevant and pragmatic in terms of its intrinsic grounding in the discipline of social science. It also raises scores of questions on how to construct our ideas, views and attitudes toward the society in which an overtly co-relative structure of an otherwise equivalent social ambience seems to be elusive. However, the practical approach to the prevalent social structure construes a kind of society in which the sense of reciprocal relationship between men and women is opulently skewed. The seminar has blatantly hammered the nuances of an equal social structure and apparently fed into the minds of the participants who have made it a point to participate in the seminar. Equally, it has also raised some burning questions on how to address the challenges that is constantly plaguing the gender-centric social structure.

One day National level Seminar on

GENDER AND SOCIETY : DIFFERENT DIMENSIONS

Organized by the Department of History & the IQAC, Ramananda College, Bishnupur, Bankura.

Date: 20.12.2021 (Monday)
Time: 10:00 am (IST)
Venue: Ramnalini Chakraborty Hall & Google Meet



OBJECTIVE OF THE SEMINAR:

The discussion of gender does not only offer the scope to shape our discerning towards the gender-centric matrix, but also provides the impetus to peep into the terrain of a long-overlooked facet of social discourse. Though women play a decisive role in our society they are overly disadvantaged in securing unfettered access to society's resources. Mere espousal of contingency of equality does not eloquently see to the uniform exercise of the window of opportunities.

The gender-oriented values and practices that get entrenched in socially-constructed institutions are woefully inadequate to be fitted in the premises of a balanced social order of gender matrix. The present seminar organised by the Department of History in association with IQAC of Ramananda College is an ideal venture into the social institutions and its footprint on the position and status of women in India.
